

Glorantha Perspectives

aleascript@proton.me

Version 0.3, 2026-08-15

Table of Contents

I. Introduction & Intent Note	2
A. The philosophy of the game	2
B. Glorantha for beginners	3
C. The great frames of thought	3
D. The social contract as a backbone	4
II. The Protagonists	5
A. Creating Player Characters (PCs)	5
B. Non-Player Characters (NPCs)	5
C. Creation Examples	6
Example 1: A detailed Orlanthi PC	6
Example 2: A Lunar NPC (Light)	6
III. The Narrative Engine: Camps, Stakes & Resolutions	7
A. Determining Camps and Stakes	7
B. The Focus and Framework Factors	7
The "zero-sum" approach and diegetic self-balancing	8
C. Managing Difficulty: The Destiny Gauge	8
D. Abstract Obstacles	9
E. The Resolution Zoom: Action, Sequence or Script	9
F. Keyed Obstacles: Solving a Problem	9
G. Resolution, Interpretation and Retributions	10
H. Draws without Opposition: Measuring the Scale	10
I. Managing Lethality	11
IV. The Frames of Thought	12
A. Theism: The Way of the Gods	12
B. Animism: The World of Spirits	13
C. Logic: The Invisible God	14
D. Mysticism: Illumination	14
E. Draconic Thought: The Dragon's Dream	15
F. External Influences: The Lunar Way	16
G. Illumination: Freeing Oneself from the Web	17
H. The Taint of Chaos: The Anti-Rule	19
I. Taboos, Geasa & Oaths	20
V. High Magic: Myths and Heroquests	24
A. Heroquesting	24
B. Creating Myths (Tool for Destiny)	24
C. The Ultimate Quest: Discovering a New Frame of Thought	25
VI. Destiny's Toolbox (Exploration & Inspiration)	26
A. Runic Inspiration	26
Summary Table of the Power Runes	26

Detailed description of the runic correspondences	27
Temporal and Spatial Landmarks	30
B. The Gloranthan Daily Life	30
The Random Calendar	30
The Economy	31
C. The Mark of the Runes	31
D. Gloranthan Themes & Multiverse (YAG)	32
Hero Wars Themes	32
YAG (Yet Another Glorantha)	32
E. Game Modes	33
Solo Play (You are Destiny)	33
Group Play	33
VII. Appendices	35
A. Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)	35
B. Statistics	36
C. Player Character Examples	36
1. Hanya of Jillaro	36
2. Ikarnos of Raibanth	38
3. Jaridan	39
4. Peek-ee-peek	41
5. Irinus Solantis	42
6. Fazia Hanout	43
7. Duckita	45
8. Korlanth the Lucky	46

I. Introduction & Intent Note

A. The philosophy of the game

Glorantha Perspectives offers diegetic resources for exploring the game-world of Glorantha. The main objective of this document is to provide rules, reflections and game tools that perfectly align gameplay (the mechanics) and roleplay (the narrative and interpretation).

The absence of statistics: In this system, you will find no numerical statistics, no success percentages. Why? Because in real life, there are none. Nobody approaches a problem thinking they have a 75% chance of succeeding. On the other hand, everyone naturally weighs their strengths and weaknesses when facing a situation, without quantifying them. This instinctive assessment tempers our hope of success. That is exactly what this resolution system reflects: each stake is not a number, it is a hope.

For example, when an initiate of Orlanth charges into battle, they rather bet on the providential gust of wind that unbalances their enemy (the opportunity), on their iron broadsword, and on the "Lightning Blade" magic crackling along their weapon. Facing them, the Lunar legionnaire does not calculate percentages either. They bet on their phalanx discipline (control), on their large heavy shield, and on the blessing of the Red Moon that makes this shield exceptionally resistant. This clash of hopes translates into 3 stakes for the Orlanthi (Wind + Sword + "Lightning Blade" strengthening the weapon) against 3 stakes for the Lunar (Discipline + Shield + Blessing strengthening the defense).

The omnipotence of narration: Everything is narrative! In this system, everything is justified by the narration and it is the coherence of the story that acts as the supreme arbiter. Destiny, who embodies the game master or narrator, is invited to remain open to suggestions, but they have powerful levers to balance the debates: if it is perfectly acceptable for a player to place a stake justified by the fiction, this means that the adversary (Destiny) can in turn place another stake in response, since this focus is considered important in the scene.

The game legacy: HeroQuest and RuneQuest

- For veterans of HeroQuest (HQ): the approach is strictly the same, but purged of all statistics and numbers.
- For purists of RuneQuest (RQ): this system offers a deliberate shift from simulationism towards narrativism. Nevertheless, the resolution engine intends, in its own way, to be able to simulate any opposition.

The system was invented so that players keep permanently in mind that the world of Glorantha must be seen through very different prisms. It thus guarantees a strong coherence between the game mechanics used and the specific frame of thought of the characters.

Mind you, these rules in no way replace your readings and reflections on this world, based on the colossal body of work already written about it.

We will see further on how fiction constitutes the mechanical procedure. The focus, for instance, is extremely telling: the question is not "which attribute to use?", but what truly matters in this scene? It is a fluid logic of fiction → interpretation → mechanics → new fiction, without true separation.

The rules do not merely simulate Glorantha; they simulate the way Gloranthans understand Glorantha. A player who immerses themselves in Glorantha will be mechanically better at the table — not because they possess more points, but because they know how to see more things that can become stakes.

B. Glorantha for beginners

To harmonize the expectations of a group of players and quickly present the setting, here are the essential principles of Glorantha:

- Characters who do not belong to a community are extremely rare.
- The visual setting is equivalent to the Bronze Age. One finds primitive and barbarian cultures, as well as the beginnings of civilizations such as the Lunar Empire, the Solar Empire or the West.
- Runes are everywhere: they adorn tattoos, engravings, frescoes, armor and weapons.
- Magic is visible: the air hums, an aura appears, and physical elements sometimes take part.
- As a rule, one respects one's opponent and life, with the exception of Chaos.
- Familiar, informal address is the norm throughout the world. The West is the exception, for a strict caste hierarchy exists there.
- The world is rather colorful. Notable exceptions are the Brithini (fundamentalist and immortal Malkioni) and certain particularly wild regions.
- Currency is used for exchanges, but it remains rare and reserved for merchants or certain adventurous professions. In everyday life, barter and small change are the rule.
- Healing magic pushes back death and accelerates recovery. However, it does not regrow severed limbs.

C. The great frames of thought

In the world of Glorantha, the way one apprehends reality modifies reality itself. In accordance with the Jrusteli mono-myth, there are four great frames of thought:

-  Animism.
-  Theism.
-  The logic of the Invisible God.
-  Mysticism.

To these worldviews is added a 5th particularly complex frame of thought: Dragons and Dragonewts.

These frames of thought are fundamental: they are what allow characters to position themselves in relation to the world and to place stakes when facing a conflict or an obstacle. It is then the narration that defines what concretely comes into play in the resolution of the action.

D. The social contract as a backbone

"Many things are settled by the social contract." This stylistic clause deserves to be made explicit, for it distinguishes this system from "all-rules" games (like D&D or Pathfinder) where the GM is a strict technical arbiter. Here, Destiny is the guarantor of the myth, not of the regulations.

- The golden rule: Destiny is not the players' adversary, it is the guardian of the world's coherence.
- The weight of the universe: In Glorantha, death is rarely trivial, it carries a mythical weight. An upfront group discussion about what the table accepts as risk (lethal combat, sacrifices, long-term consequences) avoids frustrations.
- The rule of the last word: Destiny has authority over the acceptance of stakes, but can (and must) ask players to narratively justify an asset. The table agrees that the coherence of the universe always prevails over mechanical advantage.

II. The Protagonists

In Glorantha Perspectives, characters are not defined by numerical characteristics (Strength, Dexterity, etc.), but by narrative keywords. These keywords draw directly from the "Gloranthology" (the lore of the world) and serve to justify assets and handicaps (the famous "stakes") during a conflict.

A precise and colorful keyword (e.g., Disillusioned veteran of the Sartar Rebellion) will always be more interesting and game-generating than a generic keyword (e.g., Warrior).

A. Creating Player Characters (PCs)

Players create detailed protagonists, rooted in the world. The character sheet is divided into several facets:

- Identity: Name, Age, and a Quote / Signature line. This line summarizes the character's philosophy and gives the player an immediate roleplay hook.
- Origins & Community: Lone wolves do not exist (or barely survive) in Glorantha. The character must define their Culture (Sartarite, Tarshite, Esrolian, Uz, etc.) and their precise Community (Clan, Tribe, City, Regiment).
- Frame of Thought: The prism through which the character sees the world (Animism, Theism, Logic, Mysticism, Draconic). One associates with it their spiritual allegiance (e.g., Initiate of Ernalda, Shaman of the Great Deer Spirit, Sorcerer of the Rokari School).
- The Runes (Affinities and Character): Characters are generally defined by 2 or 3 runes (Elements and Powers). In Glorantha, runes are not merely magic, they dictate character.
- Example: A character linked to the Air rune  could be proud, passionate, impulsive, even violent. A character linked to the Illusion rune  could be secretive, manipulative or mischievous. These character traits can serve as stakes (for or against the character) in a conflict.
- Keywords and Traits: A free list of talents, flaws, fetish objects or physical peculiarities (e.g., Lynx eye, Fear of horses, Family bronze axe, Political eloquence).
- States: Gradual states (injury, disruption, resources) can be added to reflect the character's evolution over the course of the game. These states can be used as stakes in conflicts.
- Links & Attachments: What binds the character to others. These can be allies, enemies, or debts (e.g., Visceral hatred of the Boar tribe, Devoted body and soul to his sister).

B. Non-Player Characters (NPCs)

Destiny (the gamemaster/narrator) does not need this level of detail to bring the world to life. NPCs can be created on the fly, very lightly. A frame of thought, an objective, and one or two keywords suffice to generate their stakes.

Anaxial's Ark or the HeroQuest supplements are solid bases for having keyword lists already prepared.

C. Creation Examples

Example 1: A detailed Orlanthi PC

Name: Varmand "Spearbreaker" (24 years old)

Quote: "The storm does not ask permission to blow!"

Origins: Sartarite Culture, Clan of the Apple Trees.

Frame of thought: Theist (Initiate of Orlanth Adventurous).

Runes:

- Air: Impulsive, hot-tempered, loud.
- Movement: Restless, unable to stay still, hates confinement.
- Death: Ruthless toward the enemies of his clan.

Keywords: Raid tactician, Broadsword inherited from his father, Voice that carries above the din, Cannot lie.

Links & Attachments: Wants to avenge his brother killed by the Lunars, Secret love for the Priestess of the neighboring clan.

In play: During a conflict to galvanize his troops, Varmand can bring into play his "Voice that carries", his Air rune (passion) and his "Inherited sword" (symbol of legitimacy) to place 3 additional stakes.

Example 2: A Lunar NPC (Light)

Name: Centurion Phargos

Frame of thought: Logic (Martial philosophy of the Empire).

Objective: Maintain order and collect taxes.

Keywords: Disciplined veteran, Phalanx training, Heavy hoplite armor, Imperial arrogance.

In play: Phargos is a solid obstacle. Facing rebels, he will use his discipline, his formation and his armor to easily generate 3 additional stakes.

III. The Narrative Engine: Camps, Stakes & Resolutions

The system is designed to resort to dice only when destiny is uncertain and a potential narrative fork appears. The central idea is simple: facing adversity, one stakes everything that could serve them in this situation, and the obstacle or adversary does the same.

A. Determining Camps and Stakes

To determine the assets that will weigh in the balance (the "stakes"), one must analyze the objectives of each camp present:

- Camp A's stakes: They are made up of the elements that favor A's objective (A+) to which are added the weaknesses or obstacles that thwart B's objective (B-).
- Camp B's stakes: They are made up of the elements that favor B's objective (B+) to which are added the weaknesses or elements that thwart A's objective (A-).

The art of seeking stakes: The search for stakes is totally free and guided by common sense as well as knowledge of Glorantha. Above all, do not limit yourself to the keywords on the character sheet! These are primarily reservoirs and sources of inspiration. The imagination of the players and the gamemaster (Destiny) must be stimulated by immersion in the world in order to unearth any relevant diegetic asset.

The opposition then comes down to confronting these two groups of stakes. Once the total number of stakes is known for each camp, one loses the mental link between the narrative element (the factor) and the die it brings. From then on, only the final number of successes of each camp matters.

B. The Focus and Framework Factors

Determining stakes is not a simple list of attributes. By immersing themselves in the situation, each party determines what is truly important at that moment: this is the Focus. Furthermore, the environment may impose a Framework Factor, an element so impactful that it expresses what will be impossible to attempt and forces the stakes to align.

Example of an opposition: Kallyr against Yanela

- The situation: Kallyr (Theist) wants to convince Yanela (High Priestess of Ernalda) to entrust her with the relic of the Earth-Trembling Staff to protect her clan. Yanela refuses, wanting to preserve the relic in the stasis of the temple.

- The Focus: Since the opposition is purely political and rhetorical, Kallyr's physical assets (such as Lightning-fast swordswoman or Long iron sword) are not taken into account in her stakes.
- The Framework Factor: The scene takes place in the Holy of Holies of Ernalda, governed by the myth of Ernalda's Peace. Any form of aggression is metaphysically stifled there. Kallyr therefore cannot resort to her Hot-Tempered trait or to intimidation, on pain of being paralyzed by the magic of the place.
- Outcome: The conflict weighs Kallyr's arguments (Royal lineage, Eloquence, Urgency, hampered by her youthful Impatience) against those of Yanela (Sacred Duty, Temple Stasis, Cultural Distrust, hampered by her Love of community). The opposition resolves on a strict 4 stakes against 4 stakes.

The "zero-sum" approach and diegetic self-balancing

Destiny has the last word and can refuse a stake. But in general, if the player justifies that a stake is valid, this has an impact on the focus and the level of detail of the scene. There is therefore a strong chance that the opposition also has a stake to place in return to counter that of the player. The clash becomes a zero-sum game, viscerally enriching the fiction.

Example: A player thinks their helmet is terrifying and asks for an additional stake.

Destiny: "The Broo facing you is not usually terrified by that. But fine, let us admit it. The Broo is intrigued by your terrifying helmet (+1 stake for you), but in return, you are disturbed by the purulent organs hanging from its flayed belly (+1 stake for it)."

This approach values initiative (the helmet is taken into account) while educating players organically: trying to "scrape" dice with futile arguments will only give Destiny additional narrative ammunition.

C. Managing Difficulty: The Destiny Gauge

To balance narrative difficulties throughout the game (group or solo), Destiny can use a global gauge.

- The gauge starts at zero.
- It can be represented by dice or tokens: one color marked with the Luck rune  for the heroes (+1), and one color marked with the Destiny rune  for adversity (-1).
- If the heroes face a conflict with fewer stakes than the adversity, the gauge gains one Hero token per stake difference to compensate for this imbalance (destiny will soon turn in their favor). And conversely.
- If the gamemaster imposes a free narrative difficulty, they grant a Hero token. Conversely, an advantage without conflict for the heroes will make the gauge gain an Adversity token.

- These accumulated points serve as a guide to adjust the stakes of future conflicts and create "breathing room" in the narrative.

D. Abstract Obstacles

How to resolve a draw against an obstacle not tied to a frame of thought (climbing a mountain, resisting the climate)? Two options are available to you:

- The Mirror mode: The obstacle is resolved with the same frame of thought as the protagonist (e.g., the rules of mysticism for a mystic). This is the recommended frame when the stakes represent a true self-transcendence.
- The Agnostic mode (The Middle World): even numbers (2, 4, 6) are successes and odd numbers (1, 3, 5) are failures, without any other adjustment rule. This frame is used when the stakes are minor and do not involve the character emotionally.

E. The Resolution Zoom: Action, Sequence or Script

An opposition can cover an isolated action (an assault, a plea) as well as a whole series of actions spread over time (a plan). This is called a resolution zoom, and the choice of this zoom is often implicit. In case of ambiguity, it is the protagonist involved who chooses the level.

- The Action: The default opposition, a local and unique action.
- The Sequence: A series of actions resolved in a single draw to cover an entire scene (a raid, a ceremony, a crossing).
- The Script: A sequence of actions or scenes known in advance leading to a result (a heroic quest, a succession of trials).

Playing a sequence: The opposition is played in a single draw to know the overall result. A sequence can be used to resolve a simple house burglary, a negotiation or a fight, but also an immense battle involving several armies.

Resolving a script: One breaks down the obstacle into steps (actions for a sequence, scenes for a script) and each step represents one or more key milestones to cross. Then the stakes of each camp are gathered and the normal draw is made. In case of failure, count the number of successes obtained by the protagonist camp to locate the step that failed (one success = one step crossed). In case of success, one has necessarily gone all the way. The rest can then be narrated collectively.

F. Keyed Obstacles: Solving a Problem

Some obstacles are real problems to solve: a riddle, an investigation, a complex craft, something to repair. On the obstacle side, one then defines a number of keys that will have to be discovered or crossed to succeed. Examples: an investigation (the culprit, the motive, the modus operandi) or a potion to brew (the laboratory, the ingredients, the recipe).

The opposition is then made against the number of keys to discover.

G. Resolution, Interpretation and Retributions

Each camp makes its dice draw according to the specific rules of its Frame of Thought (Theism, Animism, Logic, Mysticism). The one who obtains the most successes wins the conflict.

Graduation of the Result:

- Difference of 2 successes or more: The action ends in a Feat (or a Fiasco).
- Difference of 1 success: The action ends in a Victory/Success (or a Defeat/Failure).
- Tie: The action ends in a Status quo (or Reversal). If it is impossible to remain on a narrative status quo, each camp adds one additional stake symbolizing the escalation, and a new draw is made.

The Retributions and Evolution:

The system avoids meta-game as much as possible: there are no mechanical bonuses or penalties at the end of the game. Characters evolve in a purely diegetic way. It is indeed the narration that serves as the exclusive engine of evolution.

How does one evolve? Evolution goes through the dynamics of the character's keywords: adding new keywords, removing obsolete traits, or modifying existing elements. To this are added the retributions granted by Destiny, such as new links, attachments, gifts, a new power or an epiphany.

When does one evolve? This evolution does not occur at the end of a scenario. It happens organically during a Fiasco or a Feat (which translate into a difference of 2 successes or more in a draw), or simply when the story demands it.

H. Draws without Opposition: Measuring the Scale

Since the system is entirely narrative, it happens that the purpose of a draw is not to obtain a victory against a direct adversity. Sometimes, the point is simply to evaluate the scale of an action to measure its level of success or its level of failure.

- Measuring failure: This case is ideal in a "linear scenario" (a structure common in old-school adventures) where the final failure is in any case inevitable. The draw then determines the severity of the fall and its consequences.
- Measuring success: Perfect when it comes to quantifying the power of meticulous preparation, such as the execution of a complex ritual to enter the Hero Plane.

The Resolution:

In these specific cases, the active camp gathers its stakes and makes a standard draw, but without any opposing adversity. It then suffices to know the total number of successes obtained and to interpret it according to the dramatic situation at hand.

Getting no success in this type of draw must be interpreted as a real problem for the players, plunging the narrative immediately into crisis.

I. Managing Lethality

Although the system moves away from simulationism, you should decide at your table whether or not to keep the historical lethality of RuneQuest. In any case, to preserve immersion while avoiding the frustration of a "stupid death" on a bad draw, Destiny must always warn the player in case of lethal risk.

Here are degrees of narrative warning that Destiny can employ:

- "This could cost you dearly": risk of serious injury, loss of a precious object or an ally.
- "A failure could be fatal": possible and definitive death of the character.
- "Chaos is lurking for you": risk of irreversible transformation or permanent taint.

Facing this warning, the player has the right to opt for a strategic retreat. They can modify their diegetic objective accordingly (e.g., "I no longer seek to kill the Lunar general, but simply to delay them so that my allies can flee").

IV. The Frames of Thought

In Glorantha, magic is not a simple list of spells, it is a way of seeing the world and interacting with it. Everything is magical in a way. Magic is the way of seeing the world. The resolution mechanic therefore adapts to the character's philosophy.

A. Theism: The Way of the Gods

Philosophy: A theist interprets the world through the exemplary deeds of the Gods of their pantheon and their cult. Facing an obstacle, they mold themselves into a pre-existing frame, reproducing standardized acts and thoughts, in the hope of obtaining divine support or manifestation.

Derogatory names given by the other cultures: slaves, sheep, worshippers of false gods.

Resolution rules: One recalls one's own exploits and the glory of our Gods, and lets the latter judge who is worthy of triumphing.

- The dice even (2, 4, 6) are successes.
- The Divine Intervention: The 6s allow rerolling odd dice (divine support). This effect is cumulative if the new draw yields another 6. If the player has no more odd dice to reroll, a 6 allows them to gain new dice to roll (a true divine manifestation).

Power modes:

- Weakened: The 6s no longer have an explosive effect.
- Heroic: Any even die allows rerolling an odd die.

Accessory (The Runic Cards): For total immersion, replace the dice with a deck of 60 cards: 10 cards of the God's major Rune (the 6s), 20 cards of minor runes (the 2s and 4s), 20 neutral cards (the 3s and 5s) and 10 cards of the rune most opposed to the God (the 1s).

Coming soon, but you can totally play without these rules for now, as these new rules will only formalize what we already know about Glorantha:

- Rules for creating immersive and memorable initiations for players. Indeed, a cult is not a grab-bag list of powers. Initiation is a revelation for the character, and it must be experienced as such.
- This will help better understand how magical powers are revealed and then acquired during initiation, but also during play.
- We will also see the usefulness of sacrifices to obtain an additional stake to prepare for an important trial.

B. Animism: The World of Spirits

Philosophy: An animist constantly feels the link between the visible and invisible worlds. They stand on the threshold, between the mundane and the spiritual, trading with the surrounding spirits to capture their energies. The specific focus on odd draws represents the character's permanent attention turned towards the spirit world.

Derogatory names given by the other cultures: primitives, savages.

Resolution rules: One calls upon the spirits of the place and our invisible allies, then listens to see if the world chooses to answer us.

- The even dice (2, 4, 6) count as a success (the spirits answer).
- The Spiritual Pact (Double odd): The odd dice represent local spirits, erratic by nature. However, if two dice show exactly the same odd face (e.g., two "3s" or two "5s"), together they form 1 success. This reflects a spiritual resonance between the character's own spiritual strength (one of the dice) and a specific spirit (the other die). A temporary pact is then sealed to gain support. Orphaned odds remain indifferent.
- The Fetish: The relationship with spirits is free and spontaneous. It is possible to bind a spirit into a fetish (or conversely, suffer the departure of a bound spirit), but this only happens in the case of a decisive narrative outcome. This requires achieving a Feat (to bind) or the occurrence of a Fiasco (the spirit flees).

Power modes:

- Weakened: The link with the spirit world is broken. Spiritual pacts become impossible to seal: "double odds" no longer count and generate no successes. Only the independent spirits (the even dice) continue to manifest. Moreover, it becomes impossible to bind spirits.
- Heroic: Spiritual alignment. If the lowest die and the highest die rolled share the same parity (both even or both odd), the character obtains a total success on all their stakes.

Accessory (The Spirit Bag): Replace the dice with a bag containing 60 objects (pebbles, bones, bits of wood) marked with red runes (the successes), with green/black marks to distinguish the odds and look for doubles.

Coming soon, but you can totally play without these rules for now, as these new rules will only formalize what we already know about Glorantha:

- Rules recalling the different shamanic abilities and how they are acquired by characters.

- Rules for the basic animist (non-shaman).
- Rules on spirits of reprisal.

C. Logic: The Invisible God

Philosophy: A logician has a "scientific" and rational vision of the world: cause and effect, ingredients and recipe. Their God is invisible and does not manifest; one approaches it only through study, quantification and reason.

Derogatory names given by the other cultures: sorcery, sorcerers, materialists, vampires.

Resolution rules: Facing a problem, one aligns one's knowledge and resources, and measures accurately whether the sum of one's forces overcomes the obstacle.

- One simply adds up the value of all the dice rolled, then divides the total sum by 5.
- The result (rounded down) gives the number of successes. This is the only mode where even numbers are not intrinsically successes, symbolizing the fact that one can only rely on oneself, without miracles.

Power modes:

- Weakened: One divides the sum by 6.
- Heroic: The stage is gradual according to mastery. One divides by 4, then by 3, 2, even 1 for a being like Zzabur.

Coming soon, but you can totally play without these rules for now, as these new rules will only formalize what we already know about Glorantha:

- Rules on the different prayers and rituals, as well as on how logicians can use them to gain additional stakes.
- Rules on grimoires and enchantments.

D. Mysticism: Illumination

Philosophy: A mystic perceives the illusion of the real and of duality. They do not fight against the world, they observe how wills intertwine to reveal transformations, knowing that there is no absolute truth.

Derogatory names given by the other cultures: nihilists, charlatans.

Resolution rules:

- The dice even (2, 4, 6) are successes.
- The Annihilation: The mystic's 1s make the other camp's 6s disappear, and disappear at the same time. The resolution always happens after the opponent's full draw (including rerolls), because the mystic reveals a posteriori the illusion of their enemy's success. Thus, a seemingly weak draw can turn into an immense mystical success.

Power modes:

- Weakened: One must use two mystical "1s" to cancel a single opposing "6".
- Heroic: The mystic chooses: either they automatically obtain as many successes as their adversary without justification, or they roll normally but their "1s" can "steal" any opposing die to take its value (the adversary is faced with their own vanity).

Accessory (The Mystical Marbles): A bag of 60 colored marbles. 10 black (the 6s), 20 gray (pairs), 20 white (odds) and 10 two-colored or red (the annihilating 1s).

Coming soon, but you can totally play without these rules for now, as these new rules will only formalize what we already know about Glorantha:

- A presentation of the different ways of being a mystic in Glorantha: the Kralori mystical schools, Lunar mysticism, Dayzatar mysticism, Draconic mysticism, Nysalor mysticism...

E. Draconic Thought: The Dragon's Dream

Philosophy: Draconic magic uses the Rune of Infinity as a gauge. An adept reads the world through paradoxes. They know that forcing reality with their magic (the Wyrms) delays their own evolution toward the True Dragon stage. Their true power lies in their ability to renounce victory (the Utuma).

Derogatory names given by the other cultures: monsters, incomprehensible.

Resolution rules: Draconic stakes are played with D8s (representing the 8 power runes).

- The Standardized Action (Materialism): Every even die (2, 4, 6, 8) counts as a classic success, without spiritual consequence.
- The Draconic Rend: If the draw reveals a higher pattern — The Egg's Stasis (dice of identical value) or The Ouroboros (a 1 and an 8 simultaneously) — a strict choice is imposed on the player:
- The Wurm: The pattern is converted into successes to crush the adversary. But the character twists reality: they win the material conflict, but regress spiritually and gain a negative attachment.
- The Utuma (The Sacrifice): The character ignores the pattern to maintain their evolution. They lose the material advantage (or even their life), but rise spiritually for their next incarnation.

Power modes:

- Weakened: Numbed by matter, the character is forced to assign their complex patterns to the Wurm and suffer the regression.
- Heroic (The Awakening): The paradox fades. The character no longer has to choose: their patterns (Stasis and Ouroboros) count as dazzling successes AND they gain the spiritual benefits of the Utuma. They twist reality without binding themselves to it, understanding that the world is but their own dream.

F. External Influences: The Lunar Way

Lunar magic is subject to the lunar cycle when practiced outside the Brilliant Line. Inside this border that encircles the Lunar Empire, the moon is always full and magic is therefore not subject to these fluctuations.

Outside the Full Moon and New Moon phases, the normal resolution rules apply for all frames of thought.

Note: Adepts of Mysticism and Draconic Thought are never affected by these rules; for them, the lunar cycles are only an illusory reality to transcend.

The Full Moon

During this phase, one witnesses an incursion of mysticism into the other modes of thought: one looks toward the 1, unity and inclusion. Although this is not a true heroic mode, feeling the effects of the full moon brings within reach the possibility of transcendence for a Lunarian.

- Logic: One adds 1 to each die.
- Theism: One may reroll the 1s.
- Animism: The presence of the Moon exacerbates the resonance of the Spiritual Pact with the most unfathomable spirits. "Double 1s" no longer form a simple success, but exceptionally generate 2 successes.

The New Moon

This phase represents the trough of magical power for mortals subject to the cycles.

- Logic: The frame of thought switches to weakened mode.
- Theism: The frame of thought switches to weakened mode.
- Animism: The frame of thought switches to weakened mode.

G. Illumination: Freeing Oneself from the Web

In Glorantha, Illumination is a stunning realization, often initiated by the riddles of Nysalor or Lunar philosophy. It is the deep understanding that cosmic laws, the separation of the elements, and even the strict duality between Cosmos and Chaos, are only relative concepts. An Illumined one understands the vast joke of the universe: Arachne Solara's Web exists, but there is nothing behind it.

The Rule of Awakening: The choice of the "1"

Illumination is not acquired through experience points or at character creation. It occurs during play, at a moment of crisis where the character decides to transgress their own nature.

During a conflict resolution, a player using a classic frame of thought (Theism, Animism or Logic) can decide to "play their 1s".

By making this conscious choice, the player declares that their character frees themselves from the limits of their faith or their science. They perceive the illusion of the opposing victory.

- The Immediate Effect (The Annihilation): Like the rules of the Mystical frame of thought, the "1s" drawn by the player make the "6s" of the opposing camp disappear, and disappear at the same time. This action can overturn the outcome of a conflict that seemed lost in advance.
- The Revelation: From this instant, the character is permanently Illumined.

The Textbook Cases: The Spark and Illumination

Before Illumination, the Lunarians speak of the Spark. It is a way of perceiving Illumination, of glimpsing it, without it being fully integrated and radically changing the frame of thought of the one who experiences it.

Illumination can emerge naturally in a very specific dice configuration. The underlying idea is that the other camp understands (or even starts playing the 1s in a mystical way) to win the victory or reach a tie. Two textbook cases stand out, each corresponding to a different state: the Spark and Illumination.

The enlightening stupor: the source of the Spark

The other camp makes a draw that should have crushed the mystic, but the mystical rules end up completely reversing the result. The stupor felt can give birth to the Spark.

Example: an initiate of Orlanth (Air rune, inherited sword, gust of wind, clan blessing) charges a mystic of the Lunar College of Magic (calm, mastery of the void, perfect placement, asceticism). The initiate rolls 1,3,5,6; their 6s reroll the odds until the final draw 6,6,6,1 (three successes); the mystic rolls 1,1,1,6. After the initiate's complete draw (rerolls included), their three 6s are erased by the mystic's three 1s: only the initiate's 1 remains against the mystic's 6. The initiate experienced divine support, and yet their victory was annihilated: the stupor gives birth to the Spark, without illuminating.

The revelation through the tilt: Illumination

The other camp finds itself in a position to play a mystical move to change the final result. If it does — the choice of the "1" — it embraces Illumination.

Example: this is the way of Nysalor's riddles. A novice of the Lunar College of Magic presents herself to the master of riddles to be initiated. The encounter translates into the following stakes: her faith in the Red Goddess, her knowledge of runes, her will to understand, her readings, her ambition, her fear / paradoxes, silences, reversals, contradictions, the light of the full moon, the master's gaze. The novice (theist) rolls 1,2,3,4,5,6 → 3 successes. The master (mystic) rolls 6,1,6,1,6,1 → 3 successes. Annihilation: the master's three 1s erase the novice's three 6s. The novice: 1,2,3,4,5 → 2 successes. The master: 6,6,6 → 3 successes. The novice is about to fail her initiation. At that instant, she understands: the riddles are not there to be solved, but to be seen. The master leaves her facing her own 1. If she plays it — if she transgresses her theist faith to make a mystical move — she cancels one of the master's 6s. She plays her 1. The novice: 2,3,4,5 → 2 successes. The master: 6,6 → 2 successes. Tie rather than failure. And more than a tie: at that precise instant, she is Illumined. She understood the vast joke of the universe — questions and answers, victory and defeat are one.

The Consequences of Illumination

Becoming Illumined irremediably modifies the character's relationship to the world. They benefit from a new freedom, but pay a heavy price for it.

- The Legacy of the Frame: The character does not change their frame of thought. A Theist continues to pray to their gods and resolve their conflicts with the rules of Theism (rerolling odds on a 6). However, they forever keep the mystical ability to use their "1s" to cancel opposing "6s".
- The Permeability to Contradictions: The character is no longer constrained by the contradictions of their cult. They can, on the narrative level, combine opposing forces (use Stasis and Movement magic simultaneously) without suffering the usual backlash, because they have understood that they are one.
- The Heretic's Taint: Illumination has a smell. Fanatical, dogmatic beings or those bound to absolute principles (such as initiates of the Storm Bull, inquisitors or very ancient spirits) intuitively feel this absence of moral and cosmic limits. For them, the Illumined one exudes an unnatural aura, often assimilated to Chaos itself. The character gains a permanent negative trait such as Heretic, Abomination in the eyes of fanatics, or Aura of Nysalor, which will systematically serve as a stake against them during social or spiritual conflicts with these factions.

H. The Taint of Chaos: The Anti-Rule

"Chaos is not strong because it has better weapons. Chaos is strong because it does not play the same game as we do."

— An initiate of the Storm Bull, before charging a horde of Broos.

Chaos is the force of entropy, the absolute anti-creation that gnaws at the Cosmos. Mechanically, consorting with Chaos (willingly or out of despair) allows one to break the fundamental rules of the game and of reality, but this power is a poison. Chaos flatters, gives without counting the first time, then devours its host from the inside.

The Condition of Deviance (The Gateway)

It is not possible to invoke Chaos for a trivial action or to simply make life easier. Chaos only responds to entropy and sacrilege. To have the right to call upon this force, the action described by the player must be transgressive, destructive, cruel or fundamentally against nature. One does not use Chaos to convince a guard to let one pass or to pick a lock in silence; one uses it to make the guard's flesh liquefy or to make the door's metal howl in pain. The end no longer justifies the means: deviance becomes the indispensable means of action.

The Chaotic Temptation (The Cheat)

When a character faces certain death, a bitter failure, or is blocked by a Framework Factor, the player can invoke the force of Chaos to get out of it. This is translated narratively by an unnatural act (absorbing the energy of an impious artifact, sacrificing an ally, or letting corruption express itself).

The First Pact: The Ecstasy of Omnipotence

The first time a character succumbs to Chaos to overcome an obstacle or escape death, the temptation must be absolute.

- The Absolute Advantage: The player does not even roll the dice. They automatically obtain a Feat (an overwhelming victory), regardless of the Stakes or the power of the adversity. The chaotic anomaly purely and simply annihilates the problem, giving the player the dizzying thrill of omnipotence.
- The Counterpart: In exchange for this impious miracle, the character gains a Taint Keyword (e.g., Tentacular arm, Pus-covered skin, Thirst for fresh flesh, Voice from beyond the grave).

The Addiction: The Devouring Spiral

Chaos is hungry. Once the breach is open, Chaos seeks to slip into it, more and more. If the first "fix" is offered to hook its prey, the following uses require being fed by the character's very existence. Like a drug whose effects fade, cheating demands heavier and heavier sacrifices.

To use Chaos again in a later conflict (which mechanically allows instantly converting the dice of one's draw into critical successes, or totally ignoring a Framework Factor), the player must sacrifice a part of what binds them to the Cosmos.

- The Erasure of Identity: The player must permanently cross off one of their positive Keywords, a runic Affinity, a Bond or an Attachment from their character sheet. Narratively, the character forgets the precepts of their ancestors, destroys the love they bore for their tribe, or sees their inherited sacred weapon become gangrenous to fuel their magic.
- The Evolution of the Taint: With each new sacrifice, the Taint grows and mutates. Destiny makes the Keyword evolve in stages: the discreet sign becomes constraining, then invasive, until total hold.
- The Downfall: at a certain stage, there is nothing left to sacrifice to obtain automatic successes. The character has become a monster and their chaotic traits are, in a way, stabilized. The chaotic creatures (broods, dragon snails, etc.) you encounter are at this stage and have no automatic success thanks to Chaos: they experienced it very early in their lives and were devoured by Chaos.

The Evolution of the Taint

The Taint is not a fixed mark: it is a living Keyword of Chaos, which evolves at the pace of its use. Each cheat, each pact, each manifestation of corruption can make an existing Taint mutate rather than create a new one. Destiny makes the Keyword evolve in stages, from the most discreet sign to the most monstrous:

- The first sign: the Taint is discreet, almost benign, but already against nature. Example: a strange lump, a passing craving.
- The sign asserts itself: the Taint becomes visible and constraining. Example: the lump opens into a small tentacle; the craving becomes a thirst for human blood once a month.
- The hold grows: the Taint invades daily life. Example: the tentacle grows; the thirst becomes weekly, then daily.
- Total hold: the Taint leaves no room for the human anymore. Example: the mutation spreads across the whole body; the thirst becomes permanent and unquenchable.

Each stage strengthens the Keyword: Destiny uses it as an additional Stake for the adversity, and its new intensity lends itself to new Stakes in conflicts involving nature, the gods or healthy society.

I. Taboos, Geasa & Oaths

Philosophy: Glorantha is woven from bonds: the Web of Arachne Solara, the Great Compromise, the clan oaths, the spirit pacts. Nothing is gained without a prohibition coming in return. Some cults only reveal their secrets in exchange for a geas; a shaman who binds a spirit without a Feat receives a taboo; the Brithini have made the prohibition their immortality. The rule is simple: no power without a bond, no bond without a price.

The family of bonds:

- Taboo: a prohibition imposed by a spirit, a sacred place or a pact (the taboo of the fetish).
- Geas: an obligation or prohibition voluntarily accepted in exchange for power, often a secret (the bond of the cult).
- Vow: a promise made before a god, most often unilateral.
- Oath: a mutual bond between two parties, sealed before a divine witness (Humakt is the god of oaths).
- Prohibition: a ritual, legal or ancestral ban, which does not depend on an individual will (the prohibition of the Brithini).
- Curse: an involuntary and destructive geas, often the consequence of perjury.
- Wyrms / Utuma: the draconic bond, choosing to bind reality (the Wyrms) or to renounce it (Utuma).
- The secret name: a taboo of naming; revealing one's secret name is giving power over oneself.

These bonds are held by the runes of Stasis (the frozen commitment), Truth (the testimony) and Death (the ultimate price).

Theism: cult geasa

The model is Humakt, god of Death and oaths. Access to runic mysteries is paid with a geas: never refuse a single combat challenge, never flee a battle, never strike an enemy who cannot see you, never break an oath, never lie, never be healed by the gods of other cults, and chastity for the highest ranks. Each geas opens a secret of the Death rune; breaking it means losing the secret and incurring the god's wrath.

Other cults have their own bonds: Yelmali (chastity, no alcohol), Babeester Gor (never back down from vengeance), Ernalda (the Peace of Ernalda), Storm Bull (never flee the Chaos), Issaries (fair measure), and Eurmali who reverses geasa (where others forbid themselves, he must lie, steal and break).

Animism: the fetish taboo

When a shaman seeks to bind a spirit without having obtained a Feat, the bond is not strong enough to be shared: the spirit lets itself be enclosed in a fetish, but the bond imposes a taboo. The fetish is personal (it cannot be shared, lent or resold) and the taboo is specific to each spirit (not eating a certain meat, not crossing running water, not lying...). If the taboo is broken, the spirit flees — and may even turn against the shaman. Add to this the totemic taboos of the Hsunchen (never kill one's totem, rules of the hunt) and ghosts, spirits bound by an unfulfilled oath.

Logic: the prohibition of the Brithini

The Brithini (the immortal Malkioni) must not innovate: as long as they follow the ancestral Law of Brithos to the letter, they remain immortal. The slightest deviation, the slightest innovation, makes them mortal. Immortality is not a gift: it is a prohibition one respects. Sorcerers also bind themselves to their grimoire with vows of method and non-disclosure.

Mysticism: the illusory vow

The mystic knows that bonds are only illusions and can therefore transcend them. Voluntary asceticism remains a tool of self-overcoming (heroic mode); the Illumined one combines opposites without suffering the usual backlash.

Draconic Thought: Wyrms and Utuma

The Wyrms binds to matter (one gains, but regresses), the Utuma unbinds (one renounces, but evolves). It is the geas of dragons: power is obtained by binding, and true freedom by renouncing.

The oath: the mutual bond

The oath binds two camps before a divine witness. Perjury is a cosmic crime: it releases the other camp from its obligations and makes the perjurer a cursed being. Even the gods are bound: the Great Compromise is the greatest oath of all, and the Red Goddess has learned to circumvent its letter without breaking the bond.

Transgression

Breaking a bond is a reversal: the god turns away (theist), the spirit flees and may attack (animist), the practice unbalances and the grimoire closes (logician), the asceticism is lost (mystic), the regression is immediate (draconic). The perjurer finds no peace: "Death does not free the traitor." Their spirit remains bound, can neither join the ancestors nor be reincarnated: it becomes a ghost or an undead. Like the Taint, the Perjurer keyword is a permanent negative keyword, used automatically by Destiny against the character.

Mechanics: the double-edged keyword

- In its domain, a geas or a taboo is always a stake in the character's favor: it is a source of power, not a weakness.
- But it is a lever for Destiny: the temptation to break it, the moment when it forces the character against their own interest, becomes a frame factor or a stake of the adversity.

Swearing is a ritual that can be resolved as an opposition (an oath sworn in haste is a trap; sworn at the right moment, a feat). Perjury causes the loss of the favor (the secret, the spirit, the immortality) and the appearance of the Perjurer keyword.

Tool for Destiny: bond generator by rune

Rune	Geas, taboo or prohibition
 Movement	Never stay two nights in the same place. / Never refuse a journey. / Never sit on a throne.
 Death	Never flee. / Never refuse a challenge. / Never strike an enemy who cannot see you.
 Harmony	Never lie. / Never refuse hospitality. / Never break a promise made to an ally.
 Stasis	Obey the ancestral Law. / Never change your name. / Never leave the sacred place.
 Life	Never eat meat. / Chastity. / Never let a creature die without permission.
 Disorder	Always answer a challenge. / Never plan ahead. / Always say the first thing that comes to mind.
 Truth	Never lie, even by omission. / Reveal any secret you are asked for. / Never steal.
 Illusion	Never reveal your name. / Never show yourself twice under the same appearance. / Always wear a mask.

V. High Magic: Myths and Heroquests

The world of Glorantha is forged by myths: the stories of what happened during the Gods' Time. These myths continue to have an impact on the real world, and knowledge of the origin myth often provides the solution to present-day problems.

A. Heroquesting

A Heroquest does not simply consist of accomplishing a physical feat, but of physically or spiritually walking in the footsteps of the Gods.

- The Principle: One must succeed in accessing the Other Side (the Otherworld) and then complete the successive stages of a myth.
- Stakes and Synchronicity: A heroquest creates absolute synchronicity between the divine world and the real world (in both directions). The resolution system (the "stakes") allows one to narratively determine the level of victory of the quest and, above all, to describe the concrete and lasting effects on the real world.
- The Price to Pay: The hero very often pledges one of their aptitudes before starting the quest. If they access the Other Side, their frame of thought switches to "Heroic Mode", but they will face entities benefiting from the same advantage.
- The Path of the Myth: Heroes have every interest in following the marked path of the myth, for it shapes and confirms reality as it is. But it is possible to deviate from it, at one's own risks and perils: succeeding a deviation allows one to literally change the reality of the real world!

B. Creating Myths (Tool for Destiny)

As Destiny, you will be led to invent myths to feed your players (or your solo game) with knowledge. Every initiate of a God knows at least the myth associated with their initiation.

The ingredients of a myth:

1. A deity (or a major Hero if the myth dates from the Age of History).
2. Elements of everyday life.
3. A precise problematic.
4. The resolution of the problematic, which explains why things are now as they are.

The construction (The childish and mythological approach):

- Why?: Ask a simple, even childish assertion (e.g., "Why do dogs and cats not get along?"). The corollary of this question is the acceptance of a different initial state ("At the beginning, they were brothers").
- How?: Build the myth by explaining how we got there, involving divine elements (e.g., "Yinkin was attacked by wolves and saved by alynxes, and has since sworn a hatred for canids"). A rich myth will include deities of rival pantheons.

The Rule of Three:

Like tales, Gloranthan myths are often composed according to the rule of three: three trials, three stages, three objects. For example, it was at the fourth trial (that of weapons) that Orlanth killed Emperor Yelm, after having "failed" the first three (the dance, the magic, the music).

C. The Ultimate Quest: Discovering a New Frame of Thought

It is entirely possible to imagine a Heroquest whose goal is not to replay the past, but to elaborate brand-new adjustments to the rules of the world for those who would hold a specific Rune (as was the case for the Lunar Rune or Infinity with Ouroboros).

- Transforming the world: The act is profoundly heroic, for it is not only about changing the world, but about substantially changing the way one acts with the world. On a large scale, this is what literally transforms Gloranthan reality.
- The design challenge: The only immutable rule of Glorantha Perspectives remains the balance of destiny (A's stakes against B's stakes having to lead to a result). The most difficult — and the real achievement of this quest — is to create a rule that perfectly reflects this new way of thinking, so that the gameplay (the dice draw) is perfectly in phase with the roleplay (the nascent philosophy). Is that not, after all, the true Heroquest?

VI. Destiny's Toolbox (Exploration & Inspiration)

This last part gathers the diegetic resources allowing one to infuse the very particular color of Glorantha into your sessions, whether to generate twists, anchor the story in the everyday, or define the format of your gaming table.

A. Runic Inspiration

Runes are the building blocks of the world; they weave reality, insinuate themselves everywhere and draw the web of Destiny. At the start of a season, at the beginning of a situation, or during an inspiration drought, Destiny can draw two Power runes (via 2D8 or 8 cards) and combine their concepts to make an idea emerge.

Note on numerology: The numerical correspondence from 1 to 8 with the power runes has been lost in the winding paths of time. Some scholars whisper that it came from an ancient group of Logicians or a forgotten mystical current seeking to quantify the ineffable.

Summary Table of the Power Runes

Number	Rune	Main Theme	Question	Direction
[1]	 Movement (Discovery)	What is around, the world, places	Where?	Below
[2]	 Death (Threat)	What is different, the other, the enemy	Who?	To the right
[3]	 Harmony (Relationships)	What connects, emotions, feelings	What?	To the left
[4]	 Stasis (Law)	What is frozen, morality, authority	How?	Ahead
[5]	 Life (Resources)	What is necessary, material	How much?	Behind
[6]	 Disorder (Revelation)	What surprises, twist	When?	Above
[7]	 Truth (Knowledge)	What must be sought, studied	Why?	Inside
[8]	 Illusion (Mystery)	What is hidden, deception, vain	Unless?	Nowhere / Everywhere

Detailed description of the runic correspondences

☞ [1] Discovery (Movement)

- Body: Legs.
- The Moment (The Transit): The time that flows, the ephemeral, the urgency of the action in progress.
- Distance (The Approach): The dynamic distance, the one being crossed (the journey).
- Relationship (The Passer-by): The stranger met along the way, the scout, the furtive or nomadic contact.
- Objects: Map, compass, spyglass, boots, vehicle.
- Dwelling: Vestibule, corridor, observatory, balconies.
- Personalities: Curious, explorer, restless, unstable.
- Military options: Scouting, patrol, flanking maneuver.
- Music: D, the Dorian mode
- Taboo: Never stay two nights in the same place. / Never refuse a journey. / Never sit on a throne.

† [2] Threat (Death)

- Body: Arms.
- The Moment (The Deadline): Counted time (the countdown), the abrupt end, the dead past.
- Distance (The Abyss): The radical separation, the uncrossable border, the distance that isolates.
- Relationship (The Outcast): The sworn enemy, the banished, the breaking of the ban, the relationship broken forever.
- Objects: Weapon, poison, trap, warning symbol.
- Dwelling: Armory, dungeon, pit, encircling wall.
- Personalities: Aggressive, cruel, paranoid, protective.
- Military options: Frontal assault, intimidation, destructive raid.
- Music: B, the Locrian mode
- Taboo: Never flee. / Never refuse a challenge. / Never strike an enemy who cannot see you.

III [3] Relationships (Harmony)

- Body: Heart.
- The Moment (Synchronicity): The "Kairos" (the right moment), shared time, being "in phase".
- Distance (Proximity): The intimately shared space, the network (distance abolished by the bond).
- Relationship (The Intimate Ally): The soulmate, the clan member, total synergy and mutual aid.
- Objects: Contract, alliance (jewelry), gift, instrument.

- Dwelling: Living room, dining room.
- Personalities: Empathic, diplomat, charmer, dependent.
- Military options: Truce negotiation, mutual support, coalition.
- Music: F, the Lydian mode
- Taboo: Never lie. / Never refuse hospitality. / Never break a promise made to an ally.

◐ [4] Law (Stasis)

- Body: Torso.
- The Moment (Routine): Eternity, suspended time, the immutable and repetitive cycle.
- Distance (Anchoring): The absolute fixed point ("Here"), immobility, the immutable landmark.
- Relationship (The Institution): The formal bond (hierarchy, family duty), the superior, the vassal.
- Objects: Torque, fetish, ceremonial clothes, scales, scepter.
- Dwelling: Consultation room, central courtyard, agora.
- Personalities: Rigid, traditionalist, authoritarian, inflexible.
- Military options: Strict formation (phalanx), siege, garrison.
- Music: C, the Ionian mode
- Taboo: Obey the ancestral Law. / Never change your name. / Never leave the sacred place.

✕ [5] Resources (Life)

- Body: Genitals.
- The Moment (Growth): The time needed to mature, rewarded patience, the cycle of seasons.
- Distance (Expansion): The radiance around a center, the area of influence, the domain.
- Relationship (The Nurturer): The protector, the member of the extended family, the creditor/debtor.
- Objects: Purse, provisions, harvest tool.
- Dwelling: Kitchen, pantry, granary, safe.
- Personalities: Pragmatic, hard-working, generous, materialistic.
- Military options: Logistics, supply, plunder, war of attrition.
- Music: G, the Mixolydian mode
- Taboo: Never eat meat. / Chastity. / Never let a creature die without permission.

⌘ [6] Revelation (Disorder)

- Body: The senses.
- The Moment (The Interruption): The stunning instant, the unexpected, the brutal rupture of chronology.
- Distance (The Labyrinth): Erratic distance, disorientation, the broken or chaotic path.

- Relationship (The Traitor): The disruptor, the unpredictable antagonist, the toxic rival.
- Objects: Broken object, rare object.
- Dwelling: Unexpected room, damaged or destroyed area.
- Personalities: Unpredictable, visionary, mad, rebel.
- Military options: Shock tactics, element of surprise.
- Music: E, the Phrygian mode
- Taboo: Always answer a challenge. / Never plan ahead. / Always say the first thing that comes to mind.

Y [7] Knowledge (Truth)

- Body: Head.
- The Moment (Clarity): The decisive instant, the immutable historical fact, the exact timeline.
- Distance (The Straight Line): The shortest path, the measured and absolute trajectory.
- Relationship (The Guarantor): The reliable witness, the transparent relationship without ulterior motive.
- Objects: Book, parchment, measuring instrument, relic.
- Dwelling: Library, scriptorium, study, altar.
- Personalities: Scholar, rational, observant, pedantic.
- Military options: Intelligence, cryptography, calculated strategy.
- Music: A, the Aeolian mode
- Taboo: Never lie, even by omission. / Reveal any secret you are asked for. / Never steal.

∴ [8] Mystery (Illusion)

- Body: Internal organs.
- The Moment (The Setback): The false memory, lost time, the deceptive loop (the vain wait).
- Distance (The Mirage): Deceptive space (what seems close is far, and vice versa), the dead end.
- Relationship (The Mask): The unknown, the manipulator, the relationship based on an unspoken or a secret.
- Objects: Mask, false bottom, counterfeit money, cape.
- Dwelling: Hidden passage, labyrinth, concealed room.
- Personalities: Secretive, enigmatic, manipulative, lying.
- Military options: Camouflage, psychological warfare, feint, diversion.
- Music: the unison
- Taboo: Never reveal your name. / Never show yourself twice under the same appearance. / Always wear a mask.

Temporal and Spatial Landmarks

By observing reality, scholars have established these scales to constrain the Gloranthan imagination or generate ideas.

Draw	Temporal Landmark (Time)	Spatial Landmark (Space)
[1]	● Long before: The time of origins.	● Here: The intimate, the proximity of shadow.
[2]	⚡ Not long ago: Recent past, fluctuation.	□ Near: Where one lives, what carries our steps.
[3]	□ Now: Emotional time, the present.	⚡ Separated: The Separator, the border.
[4]	☉ Past-Present-Future: Societal time.	⌚ Around: The Vast, the space beside.
[5]	⌚ Tomorrow: Near future, change.	🌕 Far: Elsewhere, the moon in the sky.
[6]	🌕 Future: Long cycles, distant future.	☉ Very far: The Absolute, Yelm the distant.

For time, the order from 1 to 6 corresponds to the order of arrival of the Elements: darkness, water, earth, fire, air, moon.

For space, the order from 1 to 6 corresponds to what is near us and far from us: darkness, earth (or water for the Triolini), water (or earth for the Triolini), air, moon, sky.

B. The Gloranthan Daily Life

The Random Calendar

Useful for determining the influence of magic (especially Lunar), one can draw a date at random:

The Days (2D6, keep the 1st unless double):

- [1] Frost (last crescent) ●
- [2] Water (waning moon) ⚡
- [3] Clay (new moon) □
- [4] Wind (first crescent) ⌚
- [5] Fire (first quarter) ☉
- [6] Wild (full moon) 🌕
- [Double] Divine (last quarter)

The Weeks (1D8):

- [1] Disorder ☒
- [2] Harmony III
- [3] Death †
- [4] Fertility X

- [5] Stasis ☰
- [6] Movement ☳
- [7] Illusion ☶
- [8] Truth ☷

The Seasons (2D20, keep the 1st unless double):

- [1-4] Sea ☵ (spring)
- [5-8] Fire ☲ (summer)
- [9-12] Earth ☴ (late summer/autumn)
- [13-16] Dark ☱ (winter)
- [17-20] Storms ☳ (stormy late winter)
- [Double] Sacred Time ☰ (period of important rituals for the new year).

The Economy

Glorantha is a world of communities where trade remains very much regulated by certain cults. Currency is rare outside the cities.

Divine Coins: Regulate the great exchanges of the community.

- Guilders: In bronze, in the form of an exchange rune, reserved for initiates of Issaries.
- Lunes: In silver, in the shape of a lunar rune, for everyone within the Empire.
- Wheels: In gold, large round coins (Yelm's rune), used by the Dara Happan elite (worth 10 guilders).
- Bolgs: Pieces of pierced lead used by the Uz (worth 1/100th of a guilder).

Small change (and barter): For the everyday use of the majority. Copper pieces (1/100th of a Guilder), aluminium stars in the Lunar Empire, clacks (pierced stones for the Uz).

C. The Mark of the Runes

In Glorantha, runes are not mere abstract symbols, they physically mark the world and its inhabitants.

Runic Colors: Physical attributes (skin, eyes, hair) can be linked to the strong rune of birth, of initiation, or as a reward for a heroquest.

- Air: ☳ Orange or blue.

- Earth:  Olive green or brown.
- Moon:  Red or white.
- Water:  Blue or white.
- Darkness:  Dull gray or black.
- Fire:  Yellow or red.

Runic Shapes: Society adapts its geometry to the runes.

- Written or printed books are triangular.
- Currency has the shape of the exchange rune (among the Orlanthi).
- Agricultural fields are square, never rectangular.
- Swords have the shape of the Death rune.

D. Gloranthan Themes & Multiverse (YAG)

Hero Wars Themes

The world is complex enough to deal with many themes. Here are some founding axes for your campaigns:

- Man and myth: The Hero must find their place among the Gods: conform, negotiate, or go against them by replaying or modifying the myths.
- I have fought, We have won: Orlanthi motto designating the freedom to choose one's enemies. This individual fight is a liberation for all (like Orlanth killing Yelm to free the gods).
- Orlanth and the Red Goddess: Orlanth is change and the free winds. The Red Goddess seeks to stifle this freedom to impose her deceptive peace.
- Tradition and Progress: Upstarts call into question the old ways of life that ensured peace. The elders rebel against this social explosion, while the young see themselves as innovators.
- Cosmos and Chaos: The gods keep the Cosmos (the Eternal Order) against the Chaos that gathers everything that does not adapt to it and seeks to corrupt or destroy it.
- The Inclusive Empire vs Tribal Cultures: The Empire of Sedenya attempts to impose a total peace by absorbing the ways of life of its enemies. Many fight so that their culture is not disintegrated.

YAG (Yet Another Glorantha)

In response to the adage YGWV (Your Glorantha Will Vary), here is a well-assumed justification for moving away from canon: In a distant future, a Heroquest led to the mating of a Dragon with Arachne Solara. From this union, she laid thousands of eggs. Each egg that hatches corresponds to a parallel version of Glorantha. The more veined the egg, the further the version strays from the "official story". Obviously, nobody is aware of being a version of the world born from an egg. You are therefore totally free in your biases!

E. Game Modes

Solo Play (You are Destiny)

The game was mainly designed for this approach. You watch Glorantha live and die; you are the hands that weigh the Runes and the voice that tells the story.

Play as anyone: You can play Rock Spider (the near-divine Uz priestess who knows the secrets of Arachne Solara), the eye of the Dragon sleeping under the mountain, the ghost of a Scholar of the Ambiguous pursuing their experiments for eternity, or even see the world through the eyes of a mere broo.

In Practice:

1. Choose a frame to explore and create your protagonists (succinctly or in detail).
2. Use the power runes to answer questions (who, what, why...).
3. Imagine a situation with a clear conflict (a situation must lead to at least one conflict to be interesting).
4. If there is uncertainty, proceed to the oppositions using the Destiny gauge to balance gains and losses.
5. At the end of the scene, make a roll under the absolute value of Destiny: if the result is strictly lower, a twist occurs before moving on to the next scene.

Group Play

Although designed for solo, the system also shines in a group, provided one shows pedagogy to teach players the art of proposing stakes consistent with the lore.

- The Classic TTRPG Mode: One of the players takes on the role of Destiny (the Game Master), and the others each embody a character. The GM has the final say on the acceptance of stakes and can improvise the story from the rune draws.
- The Shared Mode: All the players around the table play Destiny in turn. One starts with a player who presents their idea, draws the runes and starts the story. If there are several NPCs/Obstacles, the roles are shared to determine the stakes. Destiny changes at the end of each scene (clockwise, for example). This is an excellent way to mix lore experts with players discovering the universe.

VII. Appendices

This appendix gathers two tools: a comparative table of the average number of successes of each frame of thought, and a gallery of complete player characters for inspiration or direct play.

A. Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)

For players discovering the universe

How to find or formulate "stakes" during a conflict?

Deep knowledge of the myth or of your culture is your best weapon. If you are stuck, ask yourself these three guide questions:

1. What, in my culture or my profession, gives me an advantage here?
2. Which god, spirit or ally could support me in this situation?
3. Which rune of my character is the most relevant facing this obstacle?
4. What in the situation could give me an advantage, even if it is not directly related to my character?

How to invent a name for my character?

Gloranthan names are unique, heavily typified by culture, and have no equivalent in the real world. A simple trick if a name from our world comes to mind: reverse letters or modify syllables to create a novel sound (e.g., Thomas becomes Samoth).

Can I optimize my character to make it invincible?

No. Since the system is narrative, there is no min-maxing to seek. Statistics are globally balanced by the story.

For veterans of RuneQuest, HeroQuest or QuestWorld

Where did my percentages and characteristic points go?

This system offers a deliberate shift from simulationism towards narrativism. The mechanic does not only describe what is true in the world, it describes what the character believes to be true. A stake is not a fixed mathematical bonus, it is an asset that makes sense in a precise situation.

Is the game as deadly and punishing as historical RuneQuest?

Death retains a very strong mythical weight in Glorantha. However, the rules include a mandatory "warning" mechanic by Destiny before any potentially deadly roll, allowing players to make a "strategic retreat". This avoids random or frustrating deaths while keeping the dramatic tension.

Does the Game Master have all the rights?

Destiny is not an absolute arbiter, it is the guardian of the universe's coherence. The game works on a "zero-sum" dynamic. If you brilliantly justify a stake thanks to the fiction, Destiny will widen the focus of the scene and may use it to strengthen the opposition in return. The conversation around the table always prevails.

B. Statistics

The table below gives the average number of successes obtained per draw, according to the number of stakes (from 1D to 10D) and the frame of thought used.

Number of stakes	Theism (Evens + rerolls of 6s)	Animism (Evens + double odds)	Logic (Sum / 5)	Mysticism / Utuma (Base evens)	Dragonewt (Wyrms) (The Egg's Stasis + Ouroboros)
1D	0.55	0.50	0.33	0.50	0.50
2D	1.13	1.08	1.00	1.00	1.16
3D	1.75	1.72	1.70	1.50	1.93
4D	2.38	2.40	2.40	2.00	2.78
5D	3.00	3.10	3.10	2.50	3.68
6D	3.60	3.82	3.80	3.00	4.63
7D	4.20	4.54	4.50	3.50	5.60
8D	4.80	5.28	5.20	4.00	6.57
9D	5.40	6.02	5.90	4.50	7.56
10D	6.00	6.76	6.60	5.00	8.54

One sees that the system is globally balanced. Since the engine is narrative, there is no min-maxing to seek. A stake is not a thing the character possesses, it is a thing that makes sense in the situation.

The interesting 1D stats: Logic is not efficient at resolving trivial cases. That explains why it wants to complicate things: getting more dice, splitting hairs. Those blasted rationalists!

The draconic stats: They crush everyone, but that is well deserved. However, if the dragonewt chooses the Utuma and thus the materialist way, one finds the mysticism stats again.

C. Player Character Examples

Here are a few character examples.

1. Hanya of Jillaro

Name: Hanya of Jillaro (Female, 27 years old)

Quote: "We must help the Goddess and preserve civilization"

Hanya is somewhat of an odd Guardian, for she does not carry the Moon rune. No matter: she is fully invested.

For her, the Red Moon is more an object of fear and coercion used to impose civilization. She is not initiated into the inclusive mysteries.

Not gifted for constructions like some of her sisters, she nonetheless grasped their essence through her ability to "see the long term", as if she could sense the plans unfolding.

An exalted warrior woman devoted to the cause of the Goddess and of her Conquering Daughter, Hwarin Dalthippa had a vision of the Orlanthi defeating a Lunar army. Somewhat set apart among the Sisters, she worked on including the Moon rune, which she had tattooed on her forehead, but did not succeed. Her vision then led her away from the current teachings.

Origins: Lunar citizen, Guardian of Jillaro.

Standard of living & Equipment: Standard — double-bladed axe, bow, mercury armor (does not sink), horse (thoroughbred).

Frame of thought: Theism (Novice of Hwarin Dalthippa, Celestial Pantheon - Sylila)

Runes:

-  Fire: Disciplined, uncompromising, haughty toward barbarians.
-  Harmony: Calming tensions, taking things in stride, riding horses.
-  Movement: Fast, razor-sharp axe blow, invested (the Empire is in danger!).

Virtues (Lunar/Sylila): Fight against the Storm Pantheon, Never harm the Goddess, the Emperor and the Empire, We are one, Tithe reversal, Can only be judged by an imperial tribunal.

Virtues (Guardian of Jillaro): Honor, Sacrifice, Unwavering faith, Beauty, Sylila first.

Keywords: Combat with the great double-bladed axe, Archery, Forced march, Going without sleep, Tactics, Horsemanship, Aesthete, War paint, Shaved head (moon-shaped), Knowledge of the Empire's laws, Knowledge of the City of Jillaro's laws.

Spells of the Novice of Hwarin Dalthippa (magic subject to the lunar cycle):

- Learned from the goddess: Safe road, Seeing the long term, Intimidating barbarians, Sensing the enemy's weakness, Razor-sharp axe blow, Red Mask of Terror.
- Construction: Blessing a construction, Blessing a tool, Beautifying a work, Beautifying a garden, Strengthening a wall, Steady hand, Impassable gate.
- Conquest: Intimidation of barbarians, Red Mask of Terror, Sensing the enemy's weakness, Cutting blow, Trampling (horse) the barbarians.
- Stewardship: Blessing the family, Authority of the lady of the house, Harmony of the hearth, Managing a household.

Links & Attachments: The fort of the Conquering Sister, some Silver Shields (regiment).

2. Ikarnos of Raibanth

Name: Ikarnos of Raibanth (Male, 32 years old)

Quote: "The Lunar Way will inevitably triumph"

An orphan from the slums of Raibanth who, very young, became a Lunar informer, then a spy, then an Imperial Shadow, solar creations in the service of the hidden power. Since the death of Ignifer, he finds himself distanced by the Tharkalites of Argenteus, the new Imperial Mask.

Origins: Orphan of the slums of Raibanth, Imperial Shadow.

Standard of living & Equipment: Standard — poisoned dagger, travel gear, books and writing material, horse.

Frame of thought: Logic (Pelorian of the Celestial Pantheon; Imperial Shadow, Diplomatica Scriptoriae grimoire)

Runes:

- ☐ Darkness: Enigmatic, secretive, elusive, slipping through the night.
- Y Truth: Perceptive, appealing to reason, honest.
- W Mastery: Ambitious, charismatic, inferiority complex.

Virtues (Pelorian): Adaptable, Tolerant, Inclusive, Fight against the Storm Pantheon.

Virtues (Imperial Shadow): Omerta, Self-sacrifice, Impersonal.

Keywords: Discretion, Reconnaissance, Observation, Detecting a lie, Sensing a secret, Extracting information, Memorization, Coded language, Dagger fighting, Reading/Writing New Pelorian, Knowing the Empire's rules and myths (Lunar and Dara Happan), Blending into the crowd, Having a cover.

Spells of the Diplomatica Scriptoriae grimoire (subject to the lunar cycle): Finding the path of the solution, Making the 3rd way triumph, Understanding any text, Making names forgotten.

Lunar charm (fetish, subject to the lunar cycle): Seeing in Darkness (medallion).

Links & Attachments: The Secret Phrases (informant network), Knowledge of the underworld, the Emperor (unwavering), Fazzur (loyalty), Anti-Durulz (far-fetched theory about ducks).

3. Jaridan

Name: Jaridan (Male, 48 years old)

Quote: "War is never good for trade"

Jaridan has long been an accomplished initiate. He therefore has enough experience to attempt such or such prodigy as taught by Issaries or Gultha.

A wealthy merchant who has succeeded and wants to try to preserve his clan and his family from the troubles to come. His wife, sons and daughters manage his business in his absence. An entrepreneur at heart, he also hopes to develop new markets by traveling.

Origins: Tarshite (Thane), merchant clan and family.

Standard of living & Equipment: Affluent — a mule, a horse, sacks, wares to sell, dagger, staff.

Frame of thought: Theism (Initiate of Issaries and of Gultha Languedor, Storm Pantheon without Orlanth)

Runes:

-  Earth: Pragmatic, enduring, pacifist, good-natured, benevolent.
-  Movement: Traveling discreetly, energetic, curious.
-  Exchange: Diplomat, empathetic.

Virtues (Tarshite): Courage, Generosity, Personal honor, Social justice, Piety, Wisdom, Vassalage.

Virtues (Gultha Languedor): Spirit of adventure.

Keywords: Merchant, Many contacts, Negotiating, Bookkeeping, Thrifty, Appraising goods, Merchant language, Organizing a caravan, Cartography, Orator, Staff fighting, Speaks New Pelorian and Sartarite, Basic knowledge of culture and livestock, Geography of Tarsh, Alakoring Customs & Myths, Knowledge of the Tula, Knowledge of neighboring cultures & cults (Empire + Sartar), Singing.

Spells of Issaries - Communication: Shouting with a clear voice, Impressive speech, Convincing buyer or seller, Sweet language, Speaking with one's hands.

Spells of Issaries - Merchant: Blessing a market, Creating a win-win bond,

Appraising a currency, Spotting a thief, Locking a box, Recognizing a magic object.

Spells of Gultha Languedor - Travel: Covering one's tracks, Detecting an ambush, Finding an alternate route, Finding a path, Protection during sleep.

Spells of Gultha Languedor - Communication: Making oneself understood, Friendly greetings.

Links & Attachments: His family (wife, sons and daughters who manage his business in his absence), his clan.

4. Peek-ee-peek

Name: Peek-ee-peek (Female, 22 rains)

Quote: "The prophecy is coming true and our tribe was chosen long ago to be the guardians of the Moon"

Being the only daughter of Paak-the-cunning, he spoils her more than her brothers and allowed her to follow the guardians and hunters, though as a scout. It is she who decided to head toward the Empire, hoping to carve a destiny for her people, which she deems in danger of corruption by the Empire.

Origins: Praxian Sand Nomad, Khan's daughter (Paak-the-cunning), tribe.

Standard of living & Equipment: Poor (relatively) — bow, spear, helmet, fetishes.

Frame of thought: Animism (Tradition of Waha the Butcher, Praxian animism Waha & Eiritha)

Runes:

- ☉ Moon: Sense of superiority, curious.
- † Death: Sure arrow, strong opinions, impulsive.

- ☒ Spirits: Sensitive, sensing and seeing spirits, bargaining with spirits.

Virtues (Sand Nomad): Pride, Freedom.

Virtues (Tradition of Waha): Eliminating Chaos, Soul appeasement (slain animal), Feeding, defending, alerting the tribe.

Keywords: Scout, Discreet, Keen eyesight, Bow, Spear, Riding an antelope (one with Fta-Ah), Contempt for horses, Contempt for the settled, Survival in the Wastes, Finding one's way, Reading Praxian knots, Customs, myths and geography of Prax.

Prodigies of Waha: Spear of Death.

Fetishes of Waha (with their taboos):

- Slaying the stranger (do not kill for a moon afterwards).
- Knowing the lineage (sacrifice to the ancestors at every full moon).
- Beast above man (vegetarian).
- Water-seeking spirit (drink nothing but water).
- Appeasing spirits (never defile a place inhabited by a spirit).

Links & Attachments: Her tribe, Fta-Ah her sand antelope (brave, fast, loyal).

5. Irinus Solantis

Name: Irinus Solantis (Male, 30 years old)

Quote: "Organized war with rules, not butchery"

From an old military family. Sent to Prax to shine.

Origins: Dara Happan, Decurion.

Standard of living & Equipment: Standard — the danger ring.

Frame of thought: Theism (Initiate of Urvairinus the Conqueror, Celestial Pantheon - Yelm)

Runes:

-  Fire: Thoughtful, man of duty, personal discipline.
-  Mastery: Ruthless, intimidating, organizing a plan.
-  War: Organized war with rules, not butchery.

Virtues (Dara Happan): Honor, Duty, Obedience, Loyalty to the Empire, Order and discipline.

Virtues (Initiate of Urvairinus the Conqueror): Organized war with rules, not butchery, Ruthless toward the enemies of Dara Happa, Command.

Keywords: Decurion, Ruthless, Intimidating, Personal discipline, Organizing a plan, Thoughtful, Man of duty, Knowledge of Dara Happan culture, Celestial Pantheon (Yelm), Tactics and squad command, Marching in step / formation warfare.

Spells of the Initiate of Urvairinus the Conqueror:

- Light of action: Courage, Demoralizing the enemy, Marching in step, Several attacks in one.
- Military strategy: Managing food, Convincing the inhabitants, Taking stock of an army, Sending battle orders.
- Fighting the enemies of Dara Happa (Yelm): Trolls, undead, chaos... and Orlanthi rebels.
- Being everywhere on the battlefield.
- Ultimate command (even to enemies).

Links & Attachments: Honor of the family, Defense of the Empire's interests.

6. Fazia Hanout

Name: Fazia Hanout (Female, 20 years old)

Quote: "Stealing from a thief is not stealing, is it?"

Educated, mischievous and lively, Fazia is the daughter of Hamar, an antique dealer of the Old Town. A bit of a thief on the side, she hides her belonging to the Grand Mystery — punished by the cutting off of the hand and banishment under Pavisite law, and Lunar too — but for how long?

Origins: Pavisite, Scholar rogue in her spare time.

Standard of living & Equipment: Standard — books and scholar's effects, burglar's tools (hooks, rope, pliers).

Frame of thought: Theism (Initiate of the Grand Mystery, cult of the thieves of Pavis)

Runes:

-  Darkness: Blending into the crowd, erasing one's tracks, perfect hiding place, perfect theft.
-  Illusion: Unrecognizable mask, concealing the truth, lying with conviction, hiding an object.
-  Exchange: Selfish, inventive, convincing, stealing from a thief.

Virtues (Pavisite): Independence, Resourcefulness, Merchant spirit, Distrust of the Lunar Empire.

Virtues (Initiate of the Grand Mystery): Absolute discretion, Never betraying the Mystery, Stealing from thieves, The end justifies the means.

Keywords: Scholar rogue, Bookworm, Meticulous, Inventive, Feat, Selfish, Lying with conviction, Convincing, Knowledge of Pavis and the Old Town, Blending into the crowd, Erasing one's tracks.

Spells of the Initiate of the Grand Mystery:

- Blending into the crowd.
- Unrecognizable mask.
- Erasing one's tracks.
- Concealing the truth.
- Hiding an object.
- Perfect hiding place.
- Perfect theft.

Links & Attachments: Her father Hamar, antique dealer of the Old Town, Tuck, her contact in the Grand Mystery.

7. Duckita

Name: Duckita (Durulz Duck, "old", indeterminate age)

Quote: "Could be scary if it were not a duck"

A hooded duck with dark plumage, Duckita flees the anti-Durulz persecution of the Dragon Pass: her clan has been decimated. She learned the basics of the clan's Shadow Swimmer, killed during the battle, who saved her so that the tradition would continue. Grim, she lives by night, surrounded by her feather fetishes.

Origins: Durulz of the Dragon Pass, Shadow Swimmer.

Standard of living & Equipment: Poor — feather fetishes.

Frame of thought: Animism (Shadow Swimmer, tradition of the durulz spirits)

Runes:

-  Water: Moody, perched, lives by night.

- ☒ Spirits: Hearing, feeling the spirit world, negotiating and fighting spirits, spirit travel.
- ● Darkness: Sliding into the night, grim, "seeing" in the dark, summoning a shadow.

Virtues (Durulz of the Dragon Pass): Surviving, Distrust of humans, Pride despite the curse.

Virtues (Shadow Swimmer): Exploring the shadows to lift the Durulz curse, Patience, Discretion.

Keywords: Moody, Slipping through one's fingers, Perched, Grim, Very good hearing, Sliding into the night, Bargaining with spirits, Appearing harmless, Hearing and feeling the spirit world, Negotiating and fighting spirits, "Seeing" in the dark.

Prodigies of the Shadow Swimmer:

- Imprisoning a spirit in a feather.
- Summoning a shadow.
- Spirit travel.

Weakness: Sensitive to light — she lives by night.

Links & Attachments: Hatred of Yelmites.

8. Korlanth the Lucky

Name: Korlanth La Chance (Male, 20 years old)

Quote: "I believe in my Destiny"

Son of Orlanthi immigrants who came to Pavis after the defeat against the Lunar Empire, Korlanth is a jack of all trades (construction sites, odd jobs, prowling...). He trains with weapons with his friends and follows the teachings of the Secret Wind, which he has never revealed.

He believes in his Destiny.

Origins: Sartarite Exile, Young rebel.

Standard of living & Equipment: Poor — construction tools and training weapons.

Frame of thought: Theism (Initiate of Orlanth, Storm Pantheon)

Runes:

-  Air: Rebel, acting with energy, freedom.
-  Movement: Fast, surprising the adversary, flight, storm runner.
-  Luck: Lucky, attracting coincidences, attracting sympathy, believing in one's Destiny.

Virtues (Sartarite Exile): Courage, Freedom, Solidarity, Resistance to the Lunars.

Virtues (Initiate of Orlanth): Acting with energy, Surprising the adversary, Fighting the Lunars.

Keywords: Young rebel, Jack of all trades (construction sites, odd jobs, prowling), Fast, Surprising the adversary, Weapon training, Teachings of the Secret Wind, Faith in his Destiny.

Spells of the Initiate of Orlanth:

- Catching one's breath, instilling courage.
- Preparing thunder stones (noise and confusion).
- Preparing woad (naked combat).
- Yavor, the lightning spear.
- Flight.
- Scarf of mist.
- Storm runner.
- Lance rider.

Links & Attachments: The Secret Wind, His family, Hatred of the Lunars.